HIGHEST QUALITY OF CERAMICS

Several key elements determine the quality of ceramic products. The first of them is the quality control of the very workmanship of the product already at the production stage - an even shape, lack of blemishes and irregularities, decide on the possibility of making an even transfer (it ensures the same pressure of the heating element on the whole surface). The high quality of the ceramic material guarantees the flawless whiteness of the mug's surface. Another factor is the polyester layer itself used in the coating process. The number of applied layers of polyester and its purity determine the detail of the print as well as the depth and saturation of colours.

RESISTANCE TO WASHING IN DISHWASHERS

Dishwasher resistance of the print is an extremely important feature for many customers. All mugs from the ORCA series are coated with an additional, hardened layer ensuring long-term resistance of the print (retaining details and colours) to dishwasher washing. Even after many washing cycles the mug will still look the same as the day it was made!

*The print resistance depends on the washing temperature and detergents used.

SHEET METAL COLOUR IN RELATION TO THE PRINTING EFFECT

The finishing, and above all the colour of the aluminum sheet, has a significant impact the final colour of the printed image. As in sublimation, the white colour is not printed, but comes from the substrate, only the white sheet provides a fully neutral colour. In the case of printing on coloured sheets, the final print will be tinted by its colour (this is especially visible on white and light elements). Using this phenomenon you can obtain extremely interesting artistic effects!

ALUMINUM MACHINING

When working with aluminum sheets, accessories for their processing are essential. The metal guillotine makes it possible to cut the sheet to the appropriate size, and thanks to the metal rounder you can give the corners one of several types of rounds and indentations. An interesting solution is also the aluminum bending machine. Thanks to it, the printed sheet may be given an arched shape, thanks to which it becomes a finished product without the use of MDF plaque. Grawerton sheet may also be cut independently in the milling machine, which makes it possible to obtain any shape. All accessories for aluminum can be found in this catalogue on page 44.

INK AND PAPER

FOR SUBLIMATION PRINTING

The key element in making prints with the sublimation technology is ink - it is in the process of transfer, under the influence of high temperature that evaporates and combines with polyester, which is covered by each product intended for sublimation. Its properties, together with the ICC colour profile written for it, are the condition for obtaining a print with accurate, vivid and saturated colours. The sublimation paper on which the prints are made is an intermediary in the whole process and is largely responsible for the behaviour of the ink during the transfer process.

GRAWERTON INK FOR RICOH PRINTERS

Grawerton INK for RICOH is produced for Grawerton, the highest quality ink sublimation ink for Ricoh printers. Together with the dedicated ICC color profile and Grawerton PAPER designed for Ricoh printers provides excellent, rich and faithful and accurate colors of printed photographs and graphics. A very sophisticated production and control process and control process guarantees invariability of ink chemical composition, and thus very high. The highly developed production and control process guarantees invariability of ink chemical composition and thus very high repeatability of obtained transfer results. Grawerton INK ink is closed in hermetic cartridges so that it does not change its properties under the influence of external conditions. Each cartridge has a printed expiration date of use.

SUBLIMATION PAPER GRAWERTON PAPER

Grawerton PAPER is a new generation sublimation paper. Thanks to a special coating with microscopic pores of appropriate density, it provides a very short drying time for prints. This is important for high-speed printers such as the Ricoh SG 3210DNw when making series prints. The selected basis weight and the arrangement of the fibers guarantee the proper behavior of the paper at the temperatures encountered during the transfer. The paper provides great detail and extremely high color saturation when making sublimation prints on both soft materials, such as TEXTILES or PLASTICS, and hard materials, such as CERAMICS, ALUMINUM or STONE. We recommend using Grawerton PAPER with Grawerton INK inks in order to obtain optimal transfer results. The paper is sold in a box that protects against mechanical trafficking of the sheets.

ICC COLOR PROFILE

Each printing device, as well as image display, varies in the range of colors and hues that can be rendered. These ranges are called gamut. When a material is printed on, there is also a change in color due to temperature and the reaction of the ink with the polyester coating. By performing spectrophotometric measurements we can determine how the color range displayed by the monitor and then printed by the printer will be rendered on the finished product. This information is saved in the form of a file - the ICC color profile. Introducing such a file into the system and then using it in the graphic software that we use software that we use during printing, allows to optimize the printer work, as well as to obtain the compatibility between the displayed design and the final result. The color profile is created based on tests on specific printing MACHINES and intermediary media (paper and ink). Using Grawerton materials and our ICC color profiles you will get a reproduction of photos, images and vector graphics that is exemplary in the sublimation industry. If you would like to learn more about the color behavior in sublimation, please contact our technical department. The ICC color profile for Grawerton INK is available for download on our website.
